	Get Outside Jane Drake & Ann Love Armed with Get Outside, a kid will never say, "I'm bored!" again. This book is a key to the world of fun beyond the front door. Activities are divided into four categories (Nature Lover, Outdoor Fun and Games, Cozy Inside and Look to the Sky), where readers will find instructions for making things like sundials, bird feeders and kites, as well as rules for games such as 500 Up, Spud and Shinny. Accompanying these descriptions are fun facts and scientific, historic and cultural context. The passage on playing jacks, for example, includes a sidebar about a similar game played by the ancient Greeks. Children in Northern climes will love learning to play traditional First Nations winter games and be thrilled to find out how to create a backyard ice rink. It's a wealth of fun and fascination that will captivate any young person -- who won't mind ditching the video game for the great outdoors.

	Vernon and the Snake Crystal J Stranaghan This is a fun story with an interesting twist: this book can be read from the front or the back! Decide which version of the story you want to hear - Vernon's or The Snakes- and then enjoy an entertaining tale brought to life by Eleanor's wild and wacky illustrations. When you've heard one side of the story, just flip it over for the other perspective! Vernon and the Snake are forced to face their fear of each other when they unexpectedly meet one day. There is only one backyard; will one of them be finding a new place to hang out? Or will Vernon and the Snake learn to live with each other? This is a great book for reminding kids (and grownups too) that there is more than one side to every story
